Thoroughly appreciated/enjoyed the entire workshop termed Get Out of Your Bubble, which was recently presented at Canisius College, a Jesuit/Catholic institution in Buffalo, NY.

The cultural messaging was very relatable to a primarily white first-year student audience. The workshop was well organized and masterfully facilitated by its presenter, Mr. Ron Jones.

Very seldom have I witnessed a young audience--anywhere--giving a standing ovation to a cultural presentation that dared us all to think differently with respect to diversity and its beneath the surface challenges.

Get Out of Your Bubble accomplished this—and then some!

BRAVO/ENCORE!!

Thank you so much for the Get Out of Your Bubble session at orientation. The students and staff really enjoyed it. The presentation was able to not only get the students talking to each other; it allowed them to see all the similarities that they had with one another. Identifying the different aspects of diversity helped them understand their background or experiences don't make them different, but make them special. From the program they were able to push aside the nerves of orientation and start being able to build relationships with each other right away. We received feedback right away from students saying they were glad you presented the statistics and stories the way you did during orientation. It helped them with the interactions with one another the first few days and opened their eyes to a world or perspective they didn't know was out there.

It was a great addition to our orientation program and really helped us start the year strong.

Thanks again!
